US NOT RULING OUT TALKS AFTER N. KOREA THREAT

The U.S. is not ruling out the eventual possibility of direct talks with North Korea, Deputy Secretary of State John J. Sullivan said on Tuesday, hours after Pyongyang warned nuclear war might break out at any moment. Talks between the adversaries have long been urged by China in particular, but Washington and its ally Japan have been reluctant to sit down at the table while Pyongyang continues to pursue a goal of developing a nuclear-tipped missile capable of hitting the United States. "Eventually, we don't rule out the possibility of course of direct talks," Sullivan said in Tokyo after talks with his Japanese counterpart. "Our focus is on diplomacy to solve this problem that is presented by the DPRK. We must, however, with our allies, Japan and South Korea and elsewhere, be prepared for the worst, should diplomacy fail," he said.

BIPARTISAN DEAL ON OBAMACARE FIX

Two U.S. senators on Tuesday announced a bipartisan breakthrough to shore up Obamacare for two years by reviving federal subsidies for health insurers that President Donald Trump planned to scrap, and the president voiced support for the plan. The agreement worked out by Republican Sen. Lamar Alexander and Democratic Sen. Patty Murray would meet some Democratic objectives, including a revival of the subsidies for Obamacare and restoring $106 million in funding for a federal program that helps people enroll in insurance plans. In exchange, Republicans would get more flexibility for states to offer a wider variety of health insurance plans while maintaining the requirement that sick and healthy people be charged the same rates for coverage.

ISIS DEFEATED IN RAQQA

A member of the Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF), backed by U.S. special forces, holds their flag at the iconic Al-Naim square in Raqqa on Wednesday. U.S.-backed forces said they had taken full control of Raqqa from the Islamic State group, defeating the last jihadist holdouts in the de facto Syrian capital of their now-shattered "caliphate."

STUDIOS CHIEF OUT, AFTER HARASSMENT REPORTS

Amazon Studios chief Roy Price has resigned, a company spokeswoman said on Tuesday, following reports that he harassed a producer and ignored an actress' allegation of sexual assault by disgraced producer Harvey Weinstein. Albert Cheng, the studio's chief operating officer, remains interim head of the division, the spokeswoman said. Price had gone on a leave of absence last week.

SANDERS FOCUSES ON SMALLER RACES

Sen. Bernie Sanders will focus on getting liberal candidates elected to state and local offices ahead of next year's midterm elections rather than on higher-profile U.S. congressional races, to help build a national progressive movement from the ground up. Sanders said he hoped his emphasis on school boards, city councils and statehouses will help support the next generation of activist progressive candidates and dovetail with the mission of Our Revolution, a nonprofit political group run by former staffers and volunteers for his 2016 presidential campaign. "I look at politics a little bit differently than some of my colleagues in the sense that I believe that we need to build a national grassroots movement," Sanders told Reuters in an interview on Tuesday.

New Arthritis Painkiller Works on Contact and Numbs the Pain in Seconds

New cream works faster and is more targeted than oral medications. Key ingredients penetrate the skin within seconds to relieve joint arthritis pain. Users report significant immediate relief.

By Robert Ward

Associated Health Press

BOSTON – Innovus Pharmaceuticals has introduced a new arthritis pain relief treatment that works in seconds.

Sold under the brand name Apeaz™, the new pain relief cream numbs the nerves right below the skin.

When applied to an arthritic joint, or a painful area on the body, it delivers immediate relief that lasts for hours and hours.

The powerful painkilling effect is created by the cream's active ingredient, a special medical compound.

Anesthetics are used in hospitals during surgery. They block nerve signals from the brain so that patients don't feel pain and they work fast.

The anesthetic found in Apeaz™ is the strongest available without a prescription.

The cream form allows users to directly target their area of pain. It works where it is applied. The company says this is why the product is so effective and fast acting.

"Users can expect to feel relief immediately after applying," explains Dr. Bassam Damaj, President of Innovus Pharmaceuticals.

Additional ingredients in the cream help suppress inflammation around tissues and joints. Published pre-clinical studies have shown that the ingredients in Apeaz™ can also prevent further bone and cartilage destruction.

There are also no negative side effects from the oral medication. Apeaz™ delivers its ingredients through the skin. Oral medications are absorbed in the digestive tract. Overtime, the chemicals in pills can tear the delicate lining of the stomach, causing ulcers and bleeding.

When compared to other arthritis medications, Apeaz™ is a fraction of the cost. At less than $2 a day, the cream quickly is becoming a household name.

Those with terrible arthritis in their hands and fingers, love how easy Apeaz™ is to open. The jar fits in the palm of the hand, which makes it much easier to use.

Instant Pain Relief Without a Prescription

Many Apeaz™ users report significant improvements in daily aches and pain. Many more report increased flexibility and less stiffness. They are moving pain free for the first time in years, like Henry Esber, and early user of Apeaz™.

Apeaz™* is an FDA drug with approved claims for the pain relief of the following conditions:

- Arthritis pain
- Simple back pain
- Strains
- Sprains
- Athletic injuries
- Muscle stiffness and pain
- Wrist, elbow, shoulder, hip, knee, ankle, foot, muscle or joint pain

"There will a pleasant warming sensation that is followed by a cool, soothing one. This is how you know that the active ingredients have reached the infected joint and tissue."

Works In Seconds

For arthritis sufferers, Apeaz offers impressive advantages over traditional medications. The most obvious is how quickly it relieves discomfort.

The cream contains the maximum approved dose of a top anesthetic, which penetrates the skin in a matter of seconds to numb the area that's in pain. This relief lasts for several hours.

"I've tried more pills than I can count. I've also had a handful of cortisone shots. Nothing is as effective as this product. With Apeaz™, I get relief right away. I rub a little on my knees and some through my hands. It keeps the pain away. It also prevents the pain from getting really bad. It's completely changed my life."

How It Works

"Apeaz™ contains the highest, non-prescription dose of a medical compound that fights pain on contact. When applied to the skin it goes to work within seconds by penetrating right to the source of your pain, numbing the nerve endings."

"This is why Apeaz™ is so effective for people with arthritis. It reduces pain while adding an additional layer of joint protection," explains Damaj.

A New Way to Treat Pain

Although Dr. Damaj and his team say that their cream is the fastest and most effective way to relieve arthritis pain, they believe there is still a reason to take joint pills. The most effective are those which help to further strengthen and support the joints.

That's why every container of Apeaz™ comes with ArthriVarx™, a breakthrough pill that's taking on joint support in an entirely new way.

ArthriVarx™ works on your joints, making it the perfect companion to Apeaz™.

"ArthriVarx™ contains special compounds published to lubricate the joints and connective tissues that surrounds them. With daily use, they improve joint health and can give an extra cushion," explains Dr. Damaj.

*"When combined with Apeaz™, it becomes the perfect system to tackle arthritis. While the anesthetic component of Apeaz™ is working on the outside, relieving pain on contact, ArthriVarx™ is working on the inside, adding cushioning to the joints"*

A Powerful Combination For Arthritis and Joint Pain

With daily use, Apeaz™ plus ArthriVarx™ helps users live a more vital, pain free life without any of the negative side effects or interactions associated with oral drugs.

By delivering fast, long-lasting, and targeted relief from joint pain and reducing inflammation and swelling that causes joint damage, Apeaz™ and ArthriVarx™ is the newest, most effective way to tackle your arthritis pain.

You can now enjoy an entirely new level of comfort that's both safe and affordable. It is also extremely effective, especially if nothing else has worked well for you.

SafeRideWalkSafe app keeps users safe when they're on the move

The app can let loved ones know you're OK when using ride-share services or taxis, or even walking home alone.

As thousands of women add their voices to the #MeToo campaign, the fact that women face sexual assault or harassment at alarming rates is becoming even more undeniable.

The stories being shared online cover an array of instances, whether in the workplace, at home or in public spaces. One Boston-based app is working on keeping people safer at a time when they may be particularly vulnerable: when taking a rideshare, cab or walking by themselves.

SafeRideWalkSafe is a smartphone app that provides notifications to a group of your contacts whenever you travel. The app lets users see the best route for their trip, take photos of the car's license plate or driver, if they're comfortable doing so, and customize who receives information about their trip.

When you start a ride or begin walking, SafeRideWalkSafe calculates your estimated time of arrival (ETA). At the end of your trip, it prompts you to say that you've arrived safely. If you don't confirm that button, the app informs your selected contacts via text or email that something may have gone wrong.

"What we're trying to do is create the safest possible environment for anybody both riding and walking," said CEO Greg Czarnowski. "I think it's appropriate especially in light of the all [sexual assault] stuff coming out."

The app was developed by Russel Pergament. He heard from reporters who had bad experiences in cabs while working abroad, and wanted a way to help keep them safe.

The company has been trying to enter the college market, going to deans of students to offer discounted prices, so they can tell parents and prospective enrollees that this service will be provided to students to help keep them safer on campus and off, Czarnowski said.

"With taxi cabs, one of the things we suggested is when you get in the back seat, take a picture of the medallion. That's instant identifiability and instant accountability," Czarnowski said. "Our belief has always been, in terms of discomfort in asking to take a picture, is that it makes the driver accountable. It lets them know you do have this app that is going to keep you a little bit safer and that they're on notice."

SafeRideWalkSafe aims to protect people traveling by cab, ride share or when walking. SAFERIDEWALKSAFE FACEBOOK

Boston Police Commissioner William Evans told reporters at the scene that it appears the victim was specifically targeted.

"We're trying to piece it together right now," Evans told reporters. "It wasn't random by any means."

At least two people ran away from the Holiday Inn Express after the shooting, WBZ reported, and police are looking at surveillance video as part of the investigation.

No other information is available at this time.

What Dana-Farber Wants You to Know about Inflammatory Breast Cancer

Inflammatory breast cancer (IBC) is a rare but aggressive form of breast cancer that affects young women more than older women. Because it's relatively uncommon — it represents less than five percent of all breast cancer cases — people are often confused about what inflammatory breast cancer is and how you can detect it.

Here are some common myths to help you separate fact from fiction about IBC.

If there's no lump, there's no cancer.

Fiction. Unlike other types of breast cancer, which are detected with a mass or lump in the breast, IBC may be detected without a lump. Symptoms of inflammatory breast cancer can include

- Pain or itchiness of the breast
- Redness of the breast
- Swelling or enlargement of the breast
- Swelling of the lymph nodes in the armpit or above/below the collarbone
- Thickening of the skin of the breast or ridged or dimpled skin texture (sometimes called peau d'orange, because it looks like the skin of an orange)

IBC is often misdiagnosed as an infection.

Fact. Many of the symptoms of inflammatory breast cancer are similar to the symptoms of an infection called mastitis. This similarity can complicate the diagnosis. Mastitis is treated with antibiotics, but if symptoms don't improve after a few days on antibiotics, you should talk to an oncologist who specializes in IBC.

There are effective treatments for inflammatory breast cancer.

Fact. As with many cancers, early detection is important to effective treatment. If you are concerned that you may have symptoms, don't wait. See your doctor.

Because inflammatory breast cancer involves the breast as well as the blood stream, the primary treatment is chemotherapy. There are some targeted therapies — angiogenesis drugs that target the blood vessels that cancers need to grow, and Herceptin, which targets the HER2 subtype of breast cancer, for example — that have been very effective in treating IBC.

After we get the maximum effect from chemotherapy, the next step is surgery. Unfortunately, IBC is a cancer that involves the entire breast. It doesn't just show up as a lump in one part of the breast but involves the lymphatics, which are channels that run around and through the breast. So the surgery that we need to do is a mastectomy. We then follow up with radiation to take care of any residual cancer that may be in the chest wall or in the lymph node groups.

This combination of treatment — chemotherapy, mastectomy and radiation therapy — has significantly improved survival, but more work is needed to understand this disease.

If I have a mastectomy as part of my treatment for IBC, I can't have breast reconstruction.

Fiction. While it's recommend that patients wait for six to twelve months before they have breast reconstruction, it is an option for women who have had inflammatory breast cancer.

Because IBC is rare, there is not a lot of focus on research.

Fiction. There is a great deal of research underway. Last year, Dana Farber was awarded a grant from the Inflammatory Breast Cancer Research Foundation to study IBC. We are working on a new clinical trial specifically targeting IBC and one of the important pathways that stimulates cancer growth. In addition, Dana-Farber has a clinical trial for newly diagnosed IBC which includes one of the important new drugs targeting HER2. The clinical trials for IBC always include a scientific component in order to improve our understanding of this virulent disease.

Your Highness, the royal baby, has a due date

Hold on to your proverbial hats: Prince William and Kate Middleton have announced the due date for their third royal baby.

"Their Royal Highnesses The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge are delighted to confirm they are expecting a baby in April," Kensington Palace wrote in a statement Tuesday. The lil' babe will join big brother Prince George, 4, and big sister Princess Charlotte, 2.

The couple — who appear to just love procreating — stepped out Monday for a surprise appearance to meet Paddington Bear. And Kate, who has been battling severe morning sickness, danced with the small man in the bear's outfit, appearing to have what some people would call "a good time."

Great news, then! As long as this damn baby doesn't upstage anything between Prince Harry and Meghan Markle, everything should be fine.

And we'll never be rooooyals.

Robert Pattinson leans on Katy Perry

It's his time of need, or whatever.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Robert Pattinson — he of the very chiseled chin bones — recently split from fiancée FKA Twigs (real name, Tahliah Barnett). And now, he appears to be taking a sort of creature comfort in his longtime friend Katy Perry. Which leaves just one question: But why?

E! reports that since the breakup, Pattinson has been leaning on his good friend Katy Perry. How these two are friends is really just a mystery, frankly. "Rob has been leaning a lot on Katy since his split with FKA Twigs," another source shares with the outlet. "Kate has always been a good friend to Rob over the years and has been there for him emotionally." Mmkay!

Hopefully these two people who we don't know and/or have any personal investment in won't get together. But if they do, I mean, that's also fine. Do you, y'all!

These two just can't stop, can they?

The Gaines are still talking

In late September, Chip and Joanna Gaines announced that the next season of "Fixer Upper" would be their last. Then they explained why. Now they're explaining why again, because ... well, honestly, there doesn't appear to be a reason.

The couple stopped by "Today" on Tuesday to promote Chip's new book, of course — and to also wax poetic on deciding to leave their hit show. Again.

After saying that their relationship is "as healthy as they've ever been," Chip acknowledged those pesky theories about the twosome being on the rocks.

"The most important thing in the world is Jo and I's relationship, followed very quickly by these four beautiful kids," he said. "And we didn't want to push it, red line it, for so long that we woke up and realized, we are at a point of no return. So, we wanted to take a step back." OK!

We're predicting next week, they conveniently open up again and say ... pretty much the same thing.

J. Law shares story of Hollywood harassment

In the wake of the Harvey Weinstein sexual-harassment and -assault allegations, Jennifer Lawrence is the latest celeb to speak out about the "degrading" and "humiliating" experiences that are all too common for a working actress in Hollywood today.

At the Elle Women in Hollywood Awards on Monday, the "Mother!" actress said that early on in her career, she was told by a producer to lose 15 pounds in two weeks, and that another actress had been fired from the project for failing to lose weight in time.

It gets worse.

"During this time a female producer had me do a nude line-up with about five women who were much, much, thinner than me. We all stood side-by-side with only tape on covering our privates," she said, adding that the producer told her to "use the naked photos of myself as inspiration for my diet."

When she tried to stand up for herself, she recalled, another producer told her "he didn't know why everyone thought I was so fat, he thought I was 'perfectly f—ckable.'" KATE MOONEY

J. Law speaks out.

'Una' brings a painful past to a problematic present

This psychological thriller makes "SVU" look like a children's show.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroBOS
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

Rooney Mara, Ben Mendelsohn and director Benedict Andrews have received global praise for "Una," one of the most thought-provoking films of the year that's also sure to leave you feeling very uncomfortable. They talked with Metro about the stage-to-big-screen story and the process of working with some pretty grizzly subject matters.

In the film Mara plays Una, a woman who was in a sexual relationship with Mendelsohn when she was just 13. After being incarcerated for his actions, Mendelsohn changes his name, reinvents himself, gets married ... only for Una to disrupt everything with her arrival 15 years later. And she wants some answers.

Tell us about the process of making such an intense movie

Mara: "I can feel empathy for just about every character. I feel that it's important to be able to do that. My experience with the material is so wrapped up in my feelings of it. I don't see (Una) as just a victim. I see her as much more complicated than that."

Mendelsohn: "Going into film it it's thrilling — it's an amazing psychological thriller. Rooney is one of the most immediate actors I have ever worked with. It's like table tennis, you're very close, and you need to react because that ball is coming back over the net fast."

Andrews: "You can feel the audience as they go deeper and deeper down with the two of them. It's an uncomfortable place, but they feel compelled to stay with them. We had to find the cinematic equivalent of how to take the audience ever deeper as the characters go deeper and deeper into themselves. Their relationship is so private. And part of that claustrophobia is that we're drawn into that private knot between the two of them."

What do you want audiences to take away from "Una"?

"The film kind of intelligently unpacks a lot of the moral questions," says Andrews. "You know, does someone have the right to a new life? What's it like to not be able to let go of the past? There's no condoning what happened — it's clear it f—ed up a lot of lives. That's the beginning point; we already know this is wrong. We want to get people talking and arguing about the story, inviting the audience into this uncomfortable grey area provoking conversation. The film doesn't aim to give easy moral lessons, or let people off the hook, but I believe the power of its strength is it is tender."

Why don't we see films like this more often?

"It's very unusual that you get such a storied and deep exploration of character-to-character," says Mendelsohn. In fact, I don't think I've ever done anything that has the intensity of this with just one other character. Of just consequence, storyline and scenes. And I don't think I ever will again because they don't come along very often."

"Una" is now in cinemas.

When the most challenging and powerful thing to do is just 'Breathe'

It's hard to imagine being struck down in your prime and paralyzed from the neck down by a disease that has now nearly been eradicated from the planet, but that's exactly what happened to Robin Cavendish. He was given only months to live, but his determined wife Diana refused to watch her husband wither away in the hospital and insisted he become the first-ever Polio patient to live a rich, full life with family and friends. And the medical world was changed forever.

Played by big screen Brit Andrew Garfield (as Robin) and small screen Queen from "The Crown" Claire Foy (as Diana), the film follows a traditional love story, until tragedy strikes when Robin contracts Polio. But grief and pain give way to resilience as the couple vow to see Robin thrive at a time when others with his diagnosis were locked away to die.

Foy was drawn to her character because of "the humor, the love, and the characters refusing to see themselves as downtrodden." In fact that's a theme that's linked to her last famous role (as Queen Elizabeth II) — "The generation that grew up in the War had a very clear frame of reference. Not only 'Keep calm and carry on,' but also that life throws you all kinds of problems. The idea of complaining about your lot — what we all do now — they'd be like, 'Why bother? What's wrong with you?' They weirdly live in the moment. Taking each breath as it comes. And that's so true of people when they're ill. One person makes a joke, and that moment of levity cracks through the horror. It means people are able to be more open."

Foy is charming as ever as the literal backbone of the family, but what was it like for director Andy Serkis to find a lead who could emot with his entire body at first, and then be limited to the neck up? "We went on a long search. (Garfield) just responded to the script. I knew he would. Because he's such an incredibly positive, versatile and physical actor. And we wanted someone who was an athletic actor because we wanted to really feel the loss of that athleticism, and being nailed down to just his facial expressions. And (Foy) is so honest and truthful, and is perfect for Diana because she lives in the moment, doesn't suffer fools, and has a directness and wit to her."

"Breathe" is in theaters now. GREGORY WAKEMAN

2017-18 roster breakdown

A glance at the ball handlers, wings and bigs for the Celtics heading into the 2017-18 season.

TAYLOR C. SNOW
Celtics.com
sports@metro.us

With all the versatility on the Boston Celtics roster, it's not easy placing positional labels on the players.

In the book of Brad Stevens, players generally fall into one of the three following categories — ball handlers, wings and bigs.

The Ball Handlers

Kyrie Irving

The Celtics will have a new floor general running the offense this season, and he happens to be one of the most exciting young players in the game. It may be strange at first to see Kyrie Irving handling the rock for Boston after spending the last six seasons playing for the rival Cleveland Cavaliers, but fans will soon grow accustomed to having the four-time All-Star on their side.

Irving has a sizable scoring load to replace after the departure of 2016-17 Eastern Conference scoring leader Isaiah Thomas, but he should be able to fill the void. The 25-year-old managed to put up 25.2 points per game last season while playing alongside arguably the best player on the planet in LeBron James. There's a good chance that number could rise now that he's placed in an environment where he can be the go-to scorer all the time.

Marcus Smart

Just because Irving will be responsible for a large portion of Boston's ball-handling duties does not mean that Marcus Smart should see a dip in minutes. Smart's versatility will enable him to play alongside Irving at the 2, and he'll probably even play the 3 at times. He'll also have opportunities to handle the rock while Irving plays off the ball, similar to when Thomas was in Boston.

Smart is coming off of his best NBA season, having averaged career highs of 10.6 points, 4.6 assists and 1.6 steals per game during the 2016-17 campaign. The 23-year-old was the leader of the second unit, and his role should continue to magnify as he heads into the last year of his rookie deal.

Terry Rozier

Terry Rozier emerged last postseason as Boston's secret weapon off the bench. Don't expect his electrifying play to remain a secret for long, because the whole league witnessed how he can impact a game.

Shane Larkin

Shane Larkin

The fourth-year ball handler has played for Dallas, New York and Brooklyn, and most recently played overseas for Baskonia of the Spanish League.

The Wings

Gordon Hayward

The Celtics had been in search of an elite wing scorer since the Paul Pierce era came to a close five years ago. This summer, they found their guy in Gordon Hayward.

The 6-foot-8 forward spent the majority of his first seven seasons serving as the cornerstone of the Utah Jazz. He carried a heavy load during his time in Utah and was the team's only All-Star last season, but a lot of that pressure should be taken off of his shoulders in Boston where he will join forces with fellow All-Stars Kyrie Irving and Al Horford.

Hayward is coming off of his strongest NBA campaign after averaging career highs of 21.9 points and 5.4 rebounds per game, all while leading the Jazz to a 51-31 record and the fifth seed in the 2017 Western Conference Playoffs. He also shot an impressive 47.1 percent from the field, including 39.8 percent clip from 3-point range last season, and that efficiency could surely climb this season since he will no longer be the lone scoring threat that opposing defenses will lock onto.

Marcus Morris

While Hayward's addition on the wing will give Boston explosive scoring and elite shooting, Marcus Morris will provide the C's with toughness and grit on the defensive end.

Over the last two seasons, Morris served as an instigator in Detroit's starting lineup.

Jaylen Brown

Jaylen Brown is the only returning wing from last season's squad. He's tied for the third-longest-tenured player on the team. And he's only 20 years old.

Don't let Brown's youth fool you, however; he earned plenty of regular season and playoff reps during his rookie campaign, which boosted his confidence and should allow him to come out of the gates flying when the 2017-18 season begins.

Jayson Tatum

Nineteen-year-old Jayson Tatum should take some notes from Brown's rookie campaign. If the No. 3 overall selection from the 2017 NBA Draft does that, he'll also be on track to earn some quality minutes at the wing position this season.

Tatum is the youngest player on the roster by 495 days, but his advanced skillset will likely allow him to break into the rotation immediately, just as Brown did last season. His offensive creativity, which was displayed during Summer League, is well beyond his years, and it should help him develop into a high-volume scorer during his NBA career.

Abdel Nader

While the last two No. 3 overall draft picks will be fighting for playing time this season, the third-to-last pick of the 2016 NBA Draft will be doing the same. Abdel Nader, who Boston selected 58th overall two summers ago, has shown surprising strides over the past year-plus, as he has become just the second Egyptian-born athlete to play in the NBA.

Semi Ojeleye

The Celtics parted ways with their strongest wing player in Jae Crowder over the summer, but they replaced him with someone who may be even more powerfully built. Second-round draft pick Semi Ojeleye stands at 6-foot-7, 235 pounds, and is arguably the most impressive-looking physical specimen on the team.

The Bigs

Al Horford

Former Celtics starters Isaiah Thomas, Avery Bradley and Jae Crowder all had career years last season, and that was no coincidence. It all tied into Horford's playmaking ability and exceptional basketball IQ from his frontcourt position.

Aron Baynes

The Celtics needed to pick up a traditional big man this offseason, so they went out and signed Australian center Aron Baynes. The 6-foot-10, 260-pound veteran has five NBA seasons under his belt, including an NBA title-winning campaign with the 2013-14 Spurs.

Baynes most recently played in Detroit, where he built the reputation of being a fearless, gritty body-banger — qualities which the Celtics could certainly benefit from.

Daniel Theis

The Celtics made a number of marquee moves this summer, but one that may have flown under the radar was the acquisition of Daniel Theis. The 6-foot-9, 240-pound big man spent seven years playing professionally in his home country of Germany. During that span, he was a four-time German League All-Star, a three-time German League champion, a 2017 German Cup winner, and was named the 2017 German League Best Defender.

Guerschon Yabusele

Guerschon Yabusele is an interesting case in our Roster Breakdown Series because it's difficult to predict what type of role he will have this season. That's mostly due to his unique combination of size and agility, which makes him an incredibly versatile asset.

Irving, Hayward intend to maximize potential in Boston

The Celtics acquired two new superstars this past summer.

TAYLOR C. SNOW
Celtics.com

Kyrie Irving and Gordon Hayward engaged in genial banter Sept. 1 when they gathered with Boston media for an introductory press conference at TD Garden. The dapper duo exchanged playful jokes and nudges as they yielded questions from reporters and soaked in their first collective experience as members of the Celtics.

The pair of All-Stars had been teammates for just one day, but judging by their jubilant interactions atop the podium, it seemed as if they had been colleagues for years.

Midway through the introductory presser, Hayward labeled their unification as "destiny," comically noting the fact that he and Irving share a March 23 birthday. While the statement was made somewhat in jest, Hayward may be onto something, their genuine chemistry throughout the 32-minute presser was obvious, and that should continue to enhance as they move forward as the two newest faces of the Celtics franchise.

Sept. 1 was not the first interaction between Irving and Hayward. In fact, it wasn't even the first time that the pair pursued fellowship.

Irving attempted to recruit Hayward to Cleveland during the summer of 2013 when Hayward was a restricted free agent. According to Hayward, they were keen on potentially becoming teammates.

"Kyrie came in and said how much fun it would be if I would be on the team and he kind of recruited me to go there," Hayward recollected. "And then LeBron (James) [signed with Cleveland] and that kind of squashed that whole thing. But it came full circle and here we are now."

"I think we've always had a good relationship," Hayward added, noting that they played together on the USA men's basketball team. "I haven't spent too much time with him, but I'm looking forward to doing that and learning from him."

The concept of learning and developing is what drew Hayward and Irving to the Celtics. They both saw something special brewing in Boston.

Irving spent his first six seasons in Cleveland, where he won a title of his own and had the opportunity to play alongside an all-time great in James. This summer, he expressed a desire to move on from the Cavaliers so that he could begin a new chapter in a new city where he could maximize his fullest potential while building a championship-caliber team.

"I wanted to be part of something bigger than myself," said Irving. "And when Boston came knocking, I was answering."

For Hayward, the opportunity seemed meant to be as well. After spending his first seven NBA seasons with the Utah Jazz, Hayward sees his transition to Boston as a chance to fully develop, just like Irving hopes to do.

"I think that I've kind of scratched the surface of what I can become," said Hayward, who averaged career-bests of 21.9 points and 5.4 rebounds per game last season. "And I think that being here in the city with the fans, it's just really exciting to be here."

Celtics unveil their sharp new uniforms

The Celtics' awesomely old-school uniforms get a new twist for the 2017-18 season.

TAYLOR C. SNOW

The Boston Celtics will not only be featuring an almost entirely new roster this fall; they, along with the other 29 NBA teams, will be donning fresh sets of innovative Nike uniforms when they hit the courts.

In its new global apparel partnership with the NBA, Nike has designed uniforms with AeroSwift Technology that are designed to enhance athlete performance. The Celtics officially unveiled three of their new uniforms Sept. 21 in Boston with the help of three of their newest players — Gordon Hayward, Kyrie Irving and Jayson Tatum.

"It makes sense for Nike to be taking over the uniforms and our apparel in the league," Irving told guests of the showcase. "Nike, I've been with them for the last eight years — since I was in high school — and to understand the performance base of what the uniforms entail, to see how it's revolutionized apparel, and the sneakers, and everything that's going on, there's not a better brand out there that should have the NBA right now in their hands."

How has Nike revolutionized the uniforms? It's all in the tailoring.

Nike NBA apparel team representative Peter Neal walked through some of the uniforms' most profound changes during the showcase. One noticeable difference is the rolled back seaming along the back of the jersey top, which allows a fuller range of motion for the players' arms. Neal also explained that Nike has altered the waistline to reduce the weight of "That reduction of weight really matters when you think about an NBA player, who, on average, is going to run four miles and change direction over 1,000 times over the course of a game," said

Neal. "That reduction in weight reduces the load that we're going to put on our players."

Nike has made these changes without drastically altering the traditional look of Boston's jerseys. The only major differences are the Nike logo on the front right shoulder, and the logo of Celtics partner General Electric on the front left shoulder.

Maintaining tradition was key for team president Rich Gotham 15 months ago when he and the Celtics sat down with Nike reps to discuss the jersey concept.

"When you're the Celtics and you think about uniforms — really when you think about almost any decision we make as a business — it's always about balancing the history and the tradition and the pride that goes along with the Celtics, with the desire to be innovative and the desire to be relevant," said Gotham. all about and how important the history and the tradition is to us."

One tradition that the NBA will do away with this season is the concept of having "home" and "away" uniforms. Instead, the home team will choose which uniform it will wear, and then the visiting team will pick a contrasting uniform from its own set.

There are names for each of the jerseys. There is the "Association" jersey, which is the Celtics' traditional white home jersey. There is the "Icon," which is the traditional green road jersey. And there is the "Statement," which is a new black jersey with green lettering. A fourth uniform will be released at a later date

Seeing the new jerseys in person sparked excitement for the Celtics players, who begin training camp next week.

"Now we have this lightweight uniform that we're all going to love," said Irving. "We have the Statement jersey, we have the Association, and the Icon. And when you put all those together, now you have a great lineage of uniforms that we can all be proud of."

"What a time to have Nike take over and have us as Nike athletes, and not just us as Nike athletes, but all of us across the league that are Nike athletes, pay homage to those who have come before us," continued the four-time All-Star point guard. "And I wouldn't have it any other way than having a Boston uniform on."

Before they know it, Irving and the rest of the Celtics will be donning those new uniforms, as they embrace the simple, traditional appearance, while benefiting from the performance-based technology.

Brown is determined to bring the new-look Celtics together

The second-year swingman will see an increased role with the Celtics.

TAYLOR C. SNOW
Celtics.com
sports@metro.us

From their offseason homes in Atlanta, Jaylen Brown and Al Horford watched as the contents of the 2016-17 Celtics roster separated piece by piece. Eleven of their teammates from the previous season parted ways with the organization in one way or another. By the end of the chaotic summer, the two of them made up half of Boston's returnees for the upcoming 2017-18 season.

It's a lot of change for a second-year player like Brown to endure, but fortunately he had his veteran teammate to consult with throughout the process.

"Me and Al were having numerous conversations about how crazy everything has been, about the changes," Brown said Sept. 19 at the Boston Public Schools headquarters in Roxbury, where he was a guest speaker for a "Stay In School" event presented by Arbella Insurance. "He's been in the league 10-plus years and he said he's never seen anything like this before, so it was interesting hearing his perspective."

The level-headed 20-year-old did his best to stay away from the outside noise this summer. He tried not to think of the commotion and the constant trade rumors. Instead, he focused on how he can adapt to all of the changes. He focused on how he can make things easier on his new teammates as they learn to play in a new system. And he focused on how he can be a better leader, just like Horford has proven to be.

Brown understands that Boston is bound to experience some growing pains this season considering all of the new pieces that have been added. But through the pain, he believes there will be great gain.

"It's going to take some time to jell, to get the offense flowing right, to get the kinks out, and that's OK," said Brown, whose only returning teammates aside from Horford are 23-year-old guards Terry Rozier and Marcus Smart. "We were talking about it with the kids today here from the Boston Public Schools; one of the words [we discussed] was perseverance. And that's something that we're going to have to show this year, because we're going to need it."

Despite being the second-youngest player on the team, Brown hopes to be someone that his teammates can look to for help as the Celtics develop this season.

"I think that's kind of who I am," Brown said of his expected role as a leader. "I just try to be vocal and try to lead by example."

"I'm trying to be the best version of myself every day by first being a leader of myself," Brown added. "Before you can lead anybody else, you gotta put yourself in the right position to be successful. So [that means] just coming out, playing hard, talking, competing, being a good guy off the floor, bringing us together, and things like that. It's not only essential to me; it's essential to Marcus, Al, Kyrie [Irving], Gordon [Hayward] — all those guys."

Kings is ready for its Seaport debut. PROVIDED

Break a sweat at Equinox's new location. IAN TRAVIS BARNARD

5 more reasons why you should check out Boston's Seaport home

Business is booming.

MATT JUUL
@RunTheJuuls
mattjuul@me.com

It's no secret that the Seaport District is quickly becoming Boston's hottest neighborhood. While the area already has a ton of great restaurants and bars to go along with its collection of luxury apartments, expect even more popular attractions are set to pop up in the coming months. If you're considering a move or just want to stop by the neighborhood for a day, here are five additions you should check out in the Seaport.

1. Equinox

Fitness fanatics will get the chance to break a sweat while taking in an amazing, 270-degree view of the harbor thanks to the debut of Equinox Seaport this week. Located on Northern Avenue, the state-of-the-art gym has everything you need for an intense workout, including group fitness classes, Pilates, cycling and more. Guests can also relax at Equinox's luxurious spa, as well as grab a healthy snack or drink at its Juice Press shop.

2. ShowPlace Icon

The Seaport will get its own luxury movie theater when ShowPlace Icon opens its first New England location this winter. Guests will be able to recline in heated seats, which feature over 6 feet of legroom, plus munch on an upscale lounge menu or classic movie concessions. The theater will set up shop at One Seaport below the Via Seaport residences.

3. Kings Seaport

A bowling alley will also open its doors at One Seaport when Kings debuts its latest location on Oct. 30. Fans should expect more than just pins and lanes, though, as Kings Seaport is taking things up a notch to cater to a more-adult crowd. The location will feature a "barcade" with games like foosball, air hockey and more arcade classics, plus a modern gastropub concept dubbed the Draft Room.

4. Lolita Cocina & Tequila Bar

The popular Back Bay tequila bar recently opened its second — and larger — location in Fort Point. Lolita's new spot on Summer Street is twice the size of the original, boasting 210 seats and a sunken bar featuring stained-glass panels. Guests can feast on an expanded menu of street foods, tacos and other snacks while sipping on some of Boston's best margaritas.

5. The Grand and Scorpion Bar

Get ready to party all night long when the Grand nightclub and Scorpion Bar debut on Seaport Boulevard later this month. Featuring more than 12,000 square feet of space, the Grand includes a kinetic light system and a 70-foot LED wall that will wrap around a dance floor. DJ Hardwell will help kick things off on Oct. 25, followed by performances by R3HAB on Oct. 27 and Steve Aoki on Oct. 29. Located in the same building, the Scorpion Bar will also offer plenty of beats for nightlife lovers, along with a Mexican cantina-inspired menu of food and drinks.

Pet furniture: It's a thing. Ikea has released a line for the furry dependents in your life, adorably named Lurvig, which is Swedish for "shaggy." Now when you go shopping at Ikea for your Billy bookcase, Stockholm rug or Ektorp sofa, you can throw in a piece or two for Fido or Felix, whether it's a cat-scratch mat that wraps around a table leg, or a doggy/cat bed that looks like a mini-loveseat. According to the press release, head designer Inma Bernudez wanted to create the products from "a pet's perspective," so she consulted with veterinarian Dr. Barbara Schäfer, who has also worked with Ikea on product-risk assessment.

"Our pets have their own personalities, but they have five things in common: They love sleeping, eating, playing and exercising, and being close to us. So these behaviors have been the first thing on our minds when designing these products," Bernudez explained. Schäfer and Bernudez prioritized safety, making sure that the pieces were made of durable materials that would hold up when subjected to typical pet behaviors, such as chewing and scratching.

At the same time, they also sought to make the pet line compatible

Cat scratching mat, $5.99

Relieve your feline's cat-scratch fever and let her get some stretching in via this mat that wraps around a table leg, turning into a "scratching tree."

Cat/dog bed, $49.99

This black bed for canines or felines looks like a one-cushion mini-loveseat. It unfolds into a reclining bed in case they want to stretch out their limbs.

Cushion, $7.99

It's a nice idea that your pet might want a body pillow to lounge on. This cushion comes in six color combinations and has a removable cover, so you can easily wash it when your animal inevitably dirties it up.

Slow-feed bowl, $4.99

If your dog is the type who inhales his food, this bowl has a raised area in the center, designed to slow him down and prevent an upset stomach.

Cat house on legs, $54.98

You can prop up this cat house on legs, mount it on the wall or slide it into an Ikea Kallax shelving unit, if you have one. Maybe switch it up to keep your cat entertained.

with human wares. For example, the Lurvig pet cushion has a removable cover, so owners can fill it with old clothes and the "pets get a comfortable cushion with comfortable, familiar smells, too," according to Bernudez.

Here are the niftiest finds for our furry friends from the new collection (according to our human eyes, that is).

IRVING WILL BE LEGIT THREAT TO WIN NBA MVP IN 2017-18

@burke_metro

There is an excellent track record in NBA history for elite players winning MVP awards after ugly break-ups with a team and/or fellow superstar player.

Just last season, Russell Westbrook gave a double middle finger salute to Kevin Durant for 82 games and wound up winning his first league MVP. Charles Barkley demanded a trade out of Philly in 1992, and in his first season in Phoenix he won MVP. It took LeBron James an extra year, but after his breakup with the Cavs in 2010, he won the NBA MVP and his first NBA title in 2012.

Jilted NBA players are the best performing NBA players, and it's the main reason why Kyrie Irving — who has more to prove than any player in the league this season — will win 2017-18 NBA MVP.

Now, Irving brought 90 percent of this on himself — he asked for a trade out of Cleveland — but in this case that's a good thing. He obviously craves the pressure it takes to be a team's go-to guy, and now he finally gets to be that guy by being out of LeBron's shadow.

Expect Kyrie Irving to be in the MVP conversation this season. GETTY IMAGES

Speaking of LeBron, he is the Vegas favorite to win NBA MVP right now and it does make some sense. The 32-year-old still owns the most pure talent in the league and he should feel jilted himself that Irving demanded a trade this past summer.

But at this point in LeBron's career, rest will always take priority over individual regular season accolades. In fact, it already has. LeBron only played in 74 games last season, he played 76 games the season before, and played in only 69 games the season he returned to Cleveland.

Couple that with the idea that he already has one foot out the door to LA, and it's a safe bet that LeBron won't be going full tilt for 82 games from now until mid-April.

Irving, meanwhile, will be on a Westbrook-like quest from start to finish of this season to prove he can be THE MAN on a championship caliber team.

Expect a slight uptick in points per game this season from Irving — from 25.2 last season to say, 28.0 this season. Also expect a slight uptick in team wins from the Celtics. They finished with an East-best 53 wins last season, but they absolutely own the talent to reach the 60-win mark this year. Sprinkle those numbers in with some highlight reel plays and buzzer-beaters, both of which Irving has shown time and time again to be capable of — and it's a recipe for an MVP award.

His competition beyond LeBron for the award isn't that great, either.

Kawhi Leonard in San Antonio? Ya think Gregg Popovich will play him — coming off an injury — more than 60 games this season?

Durant? Too many chefs in the MVP kitchen out in Oakland.

Westbrook? He'll be sacrificing his own numbers in order to get Carmelo and Paul George involved.

James Harden? It will take a while for him and Chris Paul to figure this backcourt timeshare thing out.

It also helps a great deal that Irving and the Celtics reside in the East. There will be some 2008 Celtics-style beat-downs of opponents this coming season because the C's will be playing a boatload of weak rosters. MVP voters will surely take notice of lopsided scores.

Winning a title this season would be the ultimate way for Irving to step out of LeBron's shadow and declare himself as a bona fide basketball god. But winning league MVP is the next best way — and with Golden State still residing out West, it'll be the easiest way for Kyrie.

B's need to take care of business when playing dregs of the NHL

The Bruins are proving to be an inconsistent bunch early in the year.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

Five games into the slog that is an 82-game regular season in the NHL is way too soon to panic. Every team will have its ups and downs no matter how good they ultimately turn out to be. That said, the Bruins (2-3-0) and their naturally worried fans have a reason to wonder what is going on with the club. The B's split the first two games of the campaign at TD Garden which was somewhat expected but they followed that up with a just-completed 1-2-0 road trip against teams that frankly will be lucky to sniff a playoff spot next spring in the Western Conference.

The easiest explanation for their schizophrenic results thus far is that they have already suffered a rash of injuries: Patrice Bergeron and David Backes — two veterans that they count on in many ways — have yet to see any game action while Noel Acciari has also been out almost the entire time. To top off Sunday's disappointing 3-1 loss at Las Vegas (4-1-0), Ryan Spooner (lower-body) and Adam McQuaid (lower-body) both left with injuries and the latter's looked particularly serious after he took a hard slap shot from former teammate Colin Miller off the inside of his right leg and had to be carried off the ice to Boston's dressing room.

"We were making it hard on ourselves," admitted Bruins left wing Brad Marchand (3 goals, 3 assists this season) after the loss to former Boston first-round pick Malcolm Subban (20 saves in his 1st NHL win) and the Golden Knights. "We were trying to do too much with the puck. We weren't directing enough pucks to the net which makes it tough to get there, you can't get rebounds."

If there is any good news for this frustrated bunch at the moment it has to be that the October schedule continues to be anything but fearsome: Boston has four games in the next two weeks and they all happen to be at the Garden, starting with Vancouver Thursday.

With all the injuries and numerous players that have yet to step up in Bergeron and Backes' absence, you better believe that a player or two will be making the short trip up 95-North from Providence to temporarily help out the Bruins.

It sounds silly a couple weeks before Halloween, but the B's can't afford to keep giving away points to opponents that are at or below their level.

Aries Temptation will lead to you being influenced by someone you love or look up to. Refuse to be swayed by others. Make up your mind based on what's best for you.

Taurus Stay focused on your goal. A physical change may be necessary. Getting along with your peers will require patience and respect. Don't take on too much.

Gemini Don't get angry when you can get moving. It's up to you to do your research and follow through with your plans. Love is highlighted.

Cancer Partnerships must be handled carefully. Use your intelligence, experience and the facts to sort out any differences you face. Overreacting won't solve a problem.

Leo Don't let annoyances at home or when dealing with friends or family get to you. See what you can do to help improve your community and those in dire need.

Virgo Take an interest in personal finances and how to stretch your money further. A small change can help you cut your overhead. Do your best to avoid a minor injury.

Libra Look at your relationships honestly. Determine what makes you happy and favor the people who contribute to your success. Walk away from excessive people.

Scorpio Think about what's going on before setting your sights on something new. Have a strategy in place and stick to a budget to come out ahead.

Sagittarius Pay more attention to your appearance. Update your image to get a better response from people you want to do business with.

Capricorn Emotional matters will escalate when dealing with a sibling, friend or someone trying to take advantage of you. Don't let anger take control. Know when to walk away.

Aquarius Share your feelings and concerns. Don't make a financial change unless you are certain it will pay off. Taking on too much mentally will come at a costly toll.

Pisces Going along with the crowd isn't in your best interest. Take your position and stand by it, no matter what others decide to do. EUGENIA LAST
